

Petroglyphs Near Albuquerque

These petroglyphs are located near Albuquerque, New Mexico. I happened to find them there while looking for rock art and signs of early habitation. I found both the art and a midden that contained shards of pottery. I took these photos in 1989 while we were living there. This site had some of the best symbols I found in my travels around the state. The people who lived there were prolific artists. As is so usual in New Mexico, the setting and the scenery at this site were spectacular. As far as I know, this is still an unprotected site, so I won't identify the location more exactly.
